Project job boom

By Eilish Massie

A key project in the impending renewables-led jobs boom in Central Queensland is expected to create 2,000 direct and indirect jobs in Gladstone.

The Hydrogen Utility's (H2U) H2-Hub™ project at Yarwun was the focus at the Australian Ammonia Energy Conference, held virtually across the country on Friday.

The Yarwun project is planned to be built in stages over the next ten years to produce up to 3 Gigawatts in electrolysis plant, and up to 5,000 tonnes of ammonia production capacity.

A strategic and suitably-located 171 hectares site in the Yarwun State Development Area (SDA) was secured by H2U under a Sale of Land Agreement with the Queensland Minister for Economic Development (MEDQ) in 2020.

The site will integrate up to eight industrial scale process trains to coincide with Gladstone's port.

Speaking from Gladstone, H2U CEO Dr At-tilio Pigneri presented to the conference about the future of their multi-billion-dollar project and how local workers stood to benefit from the new jobs that would be created.

Dr Pigneri said Gladstone was leading the pack in terms of the production and potential export of hydrogen and ammonia in Australia.

"Gladstone's proud history as an industry town and its strategic location as a port city means it truly is best placed for this new energy era in Australia," he said.

"The green hydrogen and ammonia industry will be a massive win for the local region and provide ongoing job opportunities for locals into the future.

"Our project alone will create more than 2,000 direct and indirect jobs across the construction and operation phases, and we are just one of many hydrogen projects in the pipeline for the region.

"We are already working to lock in local supply chain partnerships across a variety of sectors to support local employment."

Search for vandals

By Eilish Massie

The vandalism of a Clinton school is expected to cost $20,000 to repair the damages, according to one of the city's top cops.

In an interview with 4CC Breakfast, Sgt Wayne Butcher revealed juveniles were at the centre of a string of vandalism attacks across Gladstone.

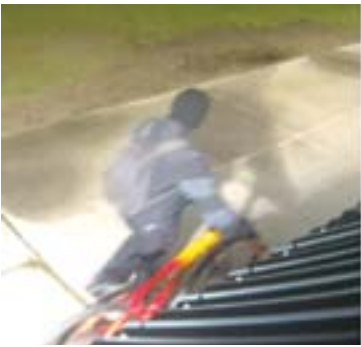

On 25 August, multiple buildings under construction at St John's on J.Hickey Avenue were sprayed with graffiti. Sgt Butcher told 4CC's Barry "Hammo" Hamilton the school had suffered $20,000 worth of damage.

"They spray painted all the security cameras, just being general nuisances and graffiti all over the Clinton, shops and the like," Sgt Butcher said. Sgt Butcher said unfortunately the school and business owners had to foot the bill to remove the graffiti.

"The school and the owners of the shop unfortunately," he said. "You'd like to think the parents would come aboard and approach the school and offer some type (of compensation) but that is all we can offer them."

Sgt Butcher said two 14-year-old boys and a 15-year-old girl were later charged with 14 offences including Enter and Commit, Wilful Damage and Stealing for the vandalism.

Sgt Butcher said two 14-year-old boys and a 15-year-old girl were later charged with 14 offences including Enter and Commit, Wilful Damage and Stealing for the vandalism.

House was also the target of a break and enter.

"Three 16 year old males were also charged with breaking into Auckland House on 18 August."

St John the Baptist Catholic Primary School principal Jamie Emerick said it was 'unfortunate' graffiti was sprayed on buildings under construction at the school.

Mr Emerick said the school immediately contacted police on discovery of the graffiti.

"The school has extensive CCTV monitoring of its site and footage was provided to Police to assist with their investigations," he said.

"I sincerely thank the Police for their assistance." Sgt Butcher said if it wasn't for crime groups on social media, the crimes would not have been solved as quickly.

"There is a couple of crime groups around town which always link what we put on the MyPolice Gladstone Facebook page," he said.

"We received a large amount of information which solved both of these crimes, the one at Auckland House and Saint Johns really quickly.

"That is what we are after, we can do warrants on these houses and get the evidence we need to prove they've committed the offences, it's great to see the community get involved.

RFDS to keep Covid safety measures

Measures put in place by the Royal Flying Doctor Service (Queensland Section) (RFDS) during the COVID-19 pandemic are here to stay, after having created flow-on benefits for the business, including those servicing Gladstone.

Early last year, the RFDS implemented the use of a fogging agent to disinfect aircraft following the transfer of potentially infectious patients.

Now, MicroSafe Australia's product Nanocyn is being used to disinfect aircraft prior to the transfer of immunocompromised patients, as well as during regular cleaning activities.

The Flying Doctor often transports patients with weakened immune systems, such as cancer patients.

RFDS (Queensland Section) State Manager Aeromedical Nursing Jacinta Jones said it takes just 30 seconds for the product to work its magic.

"In just 30 seconds, the technology can kill viruses and bacteria, making it the perfect solution to clean and disinfect the aircraft which may transport up to seven different patients each day," she said.

"We close up the aircraft, walk away for a few minutes so it can dry, get whatever else we need, and by the time we've walked back from the storeroom to the aircraft, it's ready to go.

"We absolutely love it. We can even smell the difference in the aircraft. It feels and smells cleaner, which creates a better environment for both staff and patients."

Ms Jones said the RFDS had improved its infection control through use of the Nanocyn disinfectant.

"It's really added an additional level of safety. And as the solution is 100% natural, non-toxic, non-corrosive and leaves zero residue that may harm the aircraft or medical equipment, all our equipment can remain inside the aircraft during the decontamination process."

MicroSafe Australia has now partnered with the RFDS to help ensure all Queenslanders can access the highest quality of care.

MicroSafe Australia Managing Director Matt Seifert said the RFDS (Queensland Section) faced unique infection control challenges regarding its aeromedical work.

"We are absolutely thrilled and immensely proud to partner with the RFDS (Queensland Section). The RFDS has been a global icon for aeromedical services for almost 100 years and is arguably the most respected service of its kind in the world," he said.

"We are extremely excited to be able to continue to support the RFDS in all matters related to infection control.

"The RFDS is taking no chances when it comes to safety and asset protection and having the organisation using Nanocyn successfully throughout Queensland, underlines the quality of our product."

Glencore's jobs bonanza for Central Queensland

By Duncan Evans

Commodities behemoth Glencore has some 90 jobs on offer across the six mine sites that make up its Queensland coal operations, part of a broader recruitment push that will see the company advertise for 680 positions at its enterprises across the nation.

Within Queensland, Glencore operates the Clermont Open Cut, Hail Creek, Oakey Creek, Rolleston, Newlands and Collinsville coal mines.

Clermont Open Cut, Oakey Creek and Rolleston sit in the heart of Central Queensland, while Hail Creek, Newlands and Collinsville edge towards the border of North Queensland.

Together, these operations provide 3680 jobs and last year generated a socio-economic contribution of some $4 billion.

In a press release to mark the recruitment push, Glencore Regional Human Resources Lead Jodie Hope said the opportunities on offer were underpinned by exceptional mentoring support.

"We are one of Australia's largest and most diverse natural resource companies with an existing workforce of around 18,000 people across our coal, copper, nickel, cobalt, and zinc operations," she said.

"We have industry-leading entry-level programs, with 430 apprentices and 200 graduates currently building their careers with us. We also offer specialised programs for vacation students, trainees and school leavers."

Glencore Corporate Affairs Officer Francis De Rosa also told CQ Today that the company was recruiting for a range of roles across different disciplines, and had a number of recruitment processes running at various times.

The current vacancies page on the Glencore website offers some indication of the type of jobs on offer.

The Oakey Creek mine near the Central Highlands town of Tieri, for example, is hiring for a Conveyor Operations and Install Manager.

Clermont Open Cut, meanwhile, has put the call out for a Excavator Operator to support the production team on site.

I highly recommend those who haven't gone to Spring in the Vale to put it on their calendar for next year.

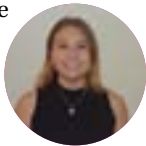

The event held at Miriam Vale's Kenmay Farm provided a great atmosphere with eight bands from across Queensland. It was the first time in a long time I got to enjoy live music again, with a lot of acts being put on hold or cancelled due to Covid.

My favourite act of the day would have to be Sailing in Space. I've never heard of them before but boy, they really gave it all during the day.

It was fantastic to see those in the community having a great time, with everyone treating the property with respect.

Can't wait to go again next year.

Confusion as signs stolen

By Eilish Massie

A Gladstone business owner is at a loss after a thief went to extraordinary lengths to steal a business sign twice in two years.

Tax agent Kerry Anger placed a sign for her business The Gladstone Office on her Beecher property along the Dawson Highway two years ago, and since then it has been stolen twice.

Ms Anger believes the latest theft happened sometime on August 27 or 28.

“I’m at a loss,” Ms Anger said.

“I haven’t knowingly done anything to upset someone, so the mentality is beyond me.”

Ms Anger said the sign was lawfully placed on her own property, and was council-approved.

After it was stolen the first time, Ms Anger had the sign deadbolted for extra protection against thieves.

She said this time round, the thief would have had to use a ladder and tools to remove the sign again.

“It took someone a lot of energy to remove it,” she said.

“The first time it happened I thought ‘ah well someone has a gripe’ and just let the universe handle it, I reported it to the police but there was nothing much they could do.

Ms Anger believes the latest theft happened sometime on August 27 or 28.

“I left it for two years and it happened again.

“I naively thought I could just risk it this time round and hopefully people have moved on but it wasn’t the case.”

Unfortunately Ms Anger’s business was not the only one that had been targeted in the area, with other businesses reporting the same bizarre circumstances happening to them.

“One of my neighbours had contacted me saying the same thing happened to them when they had a sign out of the front of their house and it was ripped out of the ground,” she said.

“I think it’s somebody with their own set of rules.”

Gladstone Police Sgt Wayne Butcher said no one had been charged yet.

“Investigations are continuing and it appears to be a local problem with what appears to be someone in the area not appreciative of the location of the sign,” he said.

Ms Anger said she has to resort to installing security cameras, which will not come at a cheap price.

“It’s too far away from the house to have wifi access so to put security cameras in it has to be cellular and that’s a big expense,” she said.

“It’s beyond frustrating, this sign had gotten me new clients and it had only been up for two weeks.

“Now it’s an out-of-pocket hassle.”

Ms Anger is asking for community support to help track down the thief.

She asks for any dashcam footage or anyone who might have seen any bizarre behaviour on August 27, August 28 on the Dawson Highway.

“I just think if somebody is doing this I’d hate to think what else they are doing,” she said.

“Police are investigating but without evidence I don’t think any of the charges will stick.

“I hope with the highway traffic going past, I’m hopeful someone saw something or had dashcam footage.”

Ms Anger thanked the community for the support she’s received on social media.

“Lots of people have reached out wishing me all the best in resolving it.”

Anyone with information is urged to contact police or Crime Stoppers on 1800 333 000.

Senior centre’s facelift

By Eilish Massie

Gladstone’s Senior Citizen Centre has a new lease on life after it underwent a $300,000 refurbishment.

It took eight months to completely restore the facility after it was successful in securing a grant from The Gladstone Foundation.

President Jeff Reeves said the refurbishment was ‘well overdue’ after the centre was last renovated 39 years ago.

“It was getting a bit tired,” Mr Reeves said.

The works were done by Beta 1 Building Gladstone, GIW Designs and Gladstone Men’s Shed.

The centre also received a donation of two automatic doors from Gladstone Ports Corporation and Aurizon. Mr Reeves said members of the centre were really happy with the outcome.

“It’s so much more modern and brighter, we are very happy,” he said.

“The feedback we’ve had from members has been so positive.

“We couldn’t thank them enough.”

Mr Reeves said the centre’s new look had the possibility of attracting more members.

“Certainly the people will talk about and others might come have a look,” he said.

“We have a library, a pool table - it’s a possibility.”

Gladstone’s Senior Citizen Centre will celebrate its official opening on October 6.

STEM makes sweet music

By Eilish Massie

Kids as young as nine got to explore the many ways science intertwined with music at a recent CQUniversity STEM event.

Years 4 to 6 students from Gladstone West State School and Boyne Island State School met with Queensland Symphony Orchestra principal percussionist David Montgomery at CQUniversity Marina Campus for the STEM meets Symphony event last Thursday, 26 August.

Students worked with robots to incorporate music and technology, made their own instruments from everyday items, and created drawings inspired by QSO music using photo technology, and coloured torches.

CQUniversity Australia Pacific LNG STEM Central Lead senior lecturer Dr Linda Pfeiffer said students had a ball, and some left the event with an interest in STEM.

"They were all interested, from my perspective, to let children know science and STEM incorporates music and the arts, it really makes the students realise STEM is a part of everyday life," Dr Pfeiffer said.

"One of the kids brought their own instruments and they thought it was amazing and another kid made his own drum set using everyday items."

The event was sponsored by Australia Pacific LNG ConocoPhillips, who also sponsored the QSO Symphony Under the Stars event.

"We thought we could bring the two (STEM and music) together," Dr Pfeiffer said.

"Science is central for everything, science is in everyday life - fishing, skateboarding, food - it wasn't that different to bring music and science together."

Dr Pfeiffer said it was crucial for students to have an interest in science for the country's future.

"We need to encourage our children to be interested and curious to ask about things because we need science literate people to run our country in the future."

Roll up! Roll up! The circus is in town

By Duncan Evans

The Lennon Bros circus rolled into Gladstone on Monday and will entertain locals until Sunday.

The circus is set up at the Gladstone showgrounds and will put on shows on Thursday and Friday night at 7pm.

On Saturday, visitors can see the performances at 2pm and 6pm.

On Sunday, the show kicks off at 11am.

Cheryl Lennon, one of the managers of the circus, told Gladstone Today that spectators would get their money's worth.

"It's non-stop entertainment," she said.

The circus will put on three major attractions.

The Globe of Death with motorbikes, the High Wire act and a Flying Trapeze.

The High Wire act features a young performer from Mexico doing all manner of astonishing things from up high. He balances on his head, rides a push bike across the wire, lays down on it and juggles.

"With no net underneath, I might add," Ms Lennon said.

Lennon Bros boasts a long history.

Though it's now a Queensland-based business, Ms Lennon said it all started back in 1893 in the Blue Mountains west of Sydney.

It started as a buck jump show, or a horseback show, that would come into town and do trick-riding.

"That's what they used to be before they turned into a circus," Ms Lennon said.

The circus has performed every year since then except for 2020 due to pandemic restrictions.

After 11 months sitting idle, the latest tour kicked off in January at the Gold Coast.

It weaved its way up the coast from Hervey Bay to Mackay and Townsville and up to Port Douglas, before circling round and nosing its way back to the south.

From Cairns, the circus has stopped by Ingham, Bowen, Moranbah, Emerald and Rockhampton.

After Gladstone, it will travel to Bundaberg.

Ms Lennon hopes to be back in Brisbane by September for the school holidays.

To date, the tour has been successful, despite the ever-present shadow of lockdowns.

"It's been successful, except when these

The High Wire act features a young performer from Mexico doing all manner of astonishing things from up high little snap lockdowns happen. Even though we're all the way up here, it still affects people. People get that little fear factor," Ms Lennon said.

Ms Lennon said the circus would adhere to a strict Covid entry policy, including QR codes and hand sanitizer.

Free science delights all

By Eilish Massie

The young and young-at-heart enjoyed some serious fun at World Science Festival Queensland's Gladstone community day on Sunday 29th August, with 1754 guests finding their fascination with science in a welcome return to the Central Queensland region.

Headline events included The Kids Variety Hour with Big Bang Education and Dr Karl Kruszelnicki, who answered science questions virtually via a live stream to the event, missions to Mars with CQ University and live experiments with STEM Punks.

The City of Science returned by popular demand featuring science innovations, drones, virtual reality and robots, Queensland Museum scientists, archaeologists and palaeontologists who delighted crowds with demonstrations, fossils and live specimens.

Queensland Museum Network CEO Dr Jim Thompson said the organisation was really excited to have the festival return to Gladstone in 2021 after Covid-19 cancelled the event last year.

"It's been two years and Gladstone always welcomes the World Science Festival," he said.

"This year, we have got more science, plenty of activities for kids and for adults, plus a range of different things to do and see that the whole family will enjoy."

Mr Thompson said at its core, Queensland Museum was a science and natural history museum, so it tried to promote science at every opportunity.

"We value partnerships like the one we have with Shell's QGC business to foster STEM subjects and learning throughout Queensland," he said.

"We want to inspire the scientists of the future, and World Science Festival is a great way to do that."

Toolooa State High School teacher Dave Capill spoke with event organisers regarding the festival's impact on budding science enthusiasts.

"Events like the World Science Festival are an awesome, authentic opportunity to see science in practice," he said.

"Coming from a high school perspective, it is also an opportunity for students to have a look at future careers."

Innovation key part of growing our food production

Central Queensland is home to a diverse range of food from beef and seafood to sugar cane and mangos. However, the agricultural economy relies heavily on science and innovation to support growth and sustainability.

As part of National Science Week, CQUniversity's CQ Festival of Food showcased the scientific processes involved in the production of food through a series of engaging experiments for primary school students.

CQUniversity Senior Lecturer, Australia Pacific LNG STEM Central Lead Dr Linda Pfeiffer collaborated with industry experts to develop relevant and engaging science experiments that provide students with a unique opportunity to explore the science behind food.

The series of experiments included four different themes: Cane Train (Mackay), Meet the Meat (Rockhampton), fishing industry (Gladstone) and Ag-Tech and dairy (Bundaberg).

Dr Pfeiffer said the themes chosen were significant to the agricultural and food technology industry in Central Queensland.

"It is important for students to understand the connection between science and food production and agriculture," Dr Pfeiffer said.

"We developed these innovative programs to imprint skills of agricultural concepts and increase knowledge of tools and systems."

Dr Pfeiffer and her team worked closely with Northview State School in Mackay, the Advanced Technology and Innovation Centre in Rockhampton, St Francis Catholic Primary School in Tannum Sands and Elliot Heads State School in Bundaberg to record demonstrations of the experiments for future use.

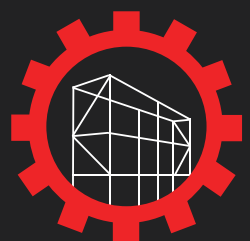

"Leading up to National Science Week, we visited four schools and with their participation we recorded experiments which are available on our website, along with the downloadable resources for each experiment," Dr Pfeiffer explained.

Experiment materials are available for teachers to borrow at Mackay, Rockhampton, Gladstone and Bundaberg campuses until the end of the year.

CQUniversity's CQ Festival of Food was awarded $16 800 in this year's round of the National Science Week grants.

Dr Pfeiffer said active participation by schools will cement the long-term sustainability of the program, as teachers gain knowledge and develop their skills on the scientific experiment process and implement these experiments in the classroom now and into the future.

Calliope Rodeo will make its spectacular return to its local showgrounds after Covid-19 cancelled the event last year.
On September 24 and 25, thousands of rodeo-enthusiasts will walk through the gates for two nights of non-stop action of bull riding, bronc riding and barrel races.

Calliope Rodeo Public Relations Officer Debbie Parr said the committee was very excited the event could go ahead this year.
"We always plan bigger and better," Ms Parr said.

"We were very fortunate to be one of the first events to open up this year, our Australia Day rodeo was beyond our expectations earlier this year."
Ms Parr said the committee was expecting a crowd of 6000 people across both days.
Entertainment will consist of Chris Bax on Friday and Luke Geiger on Saturday.

Ms Parr said there would be great local talent in the arena.
"We try and get the best bulls, we want top bulls to get the top bull riders," she said.
"One of our local families, one of their sons, is sitting at number two."
Tickets will be available for presale on Calliope Rodeo & Specialty Events facebook page.

Get set to show your wares at Beer and Cider Festival

Gladstone's premium craft drinking event is now on the hunt for food vendors and live entertainment.
CQ Beer and Cider Festival is holding a second event dubbed Beer and Cider 2.0 on 13 November, after its initial event in February received mixed reviews.
Organisers announced they are now searching for food vendors, live music, bands, duos, soloists, DJs and MCs for the upcoming event.
"We have a huge event planned and want to showcase what Central Queensland has to offer," organisers said.
Tenders are now open to those interested in participating in this year's event.
Those who are interested will need to send an email about who they are, what they do and why they want to be a part of the CQ Beer and Cider Festival 2.0 to events2@gladstonefestival.com by Friday, 17 September.
Once the closing date has passed, organisers will contact all who applied personally with further instructions if they were successful.
In July, organisers promised the second Beer and Cider festival would have additional tickets, brewers, toilets, shade, entertainment and a new location for the festival.
"We listened to the feedback and are working hard to deliver something extra special for Gladstone," organisers said.
"We at CQ Beer + Cider Festival acknowledge the issues that became apparent at the Festival in February.
"We are learning, growing and improving each year."
Organisers said they moved the date to accommodate better weather conditions.

Gladstone's premium craft drinking event is now on the hunt for food vendors and live entertainment.

"One thing we looked at was the incredible difference in how the festival ran in 2021 compared to the launch in 2020," they said.
"We want to be completely transparent with our supporters. We were just not prepared for what 2021 gave us- a totally different demographic and consumption rate -which is why we are doing everything in our power to make Beer and Cider 2.0 something to remember."

Bill passage recommended

By Duncan Evans

Parliament's Health and Environment Committee has recommended the passage of the Voluntary Assisted Dying Act 2021 following a three-month of inquiry into the controversial bill.

The bill, designed by the Queensland Law Reform Commission (QLRC), will permit eligible Queenslanders to access voluntary assisted dying (VAD) from 2023 onwards.

In order to be eligible for VAD, a person must have a terminal illness which is expected to cause death within 12 months. Furthermore, the person must consider his or her suffering intolerable, possess decision-making capacity in relation to VAD and act voluntarily and without coercion.

The committee heard submissions from over 6000 people and organisations and conducted five public hearings in regional and Southeast Queensland and has concluded that the bill should be passed in its present form without amendments.

"In considering all the evidence to this inquiry, to the inquiry by the Health, Communities, Disability Services and Domestic and Family Violence Prevention Committee of the 56th Parliament (the former committee), as well as the QLRC Report, the committee has formed the view that this Bill should be passed without amendment," the report reads.

In a telephone call with GladstoneToday, Committee Chair Aaron Harper, the state Labor member for Thuringowa, said he was confident he understood the views of Queenslanders and that a majority of the people supported legalising VAD.

"I'm of the firm view we've listened to Queenslanders," he said.

"I'm really looking forward to getting in and debating this."

The committee report is extensive, coming in at over 200 pages. It details every aspect of the bill and the arguments, positions and complexities that intersect with its various sections.

A central tension coursing through the bill revolves around achieving an appropriate balance of rights between two competing claims.

The bill introduces a new right; namely, the right of an individual to choose the time and manner of his or her own death.

In certain circumstances, this new right conflicts with pre-existing rights ostensibly guaranteed by law, notably the right to freedom of speech and freedom of conscience.

The bill acknowledges that these traditional rights will be impacted and even undermined the new law, but nonetheless preferences the right to access VAD over them.

"The QLRC considered that by allowing health practitioners to make a conscientious objection, but requiring practitioners who do so to provide information about a health practitioner, service provider or navigation service who is likely to be able to provide the requested assistance, the Bill attempts to ensure 'the exercise of a right to refuse to participate should not hinder or deprive a person of their right to access a process that is lawful'," the report reads.

The committee supports the reasoning of the QLRC:

"While the provisions in the Bill that enable an individual's conscientious objection to participating in voluntary assisted dying impose obligations which may limit the right to freedom of conscience and belief, those obligations promote the rights of others to access health care, and to promote the values of dignity and autonomy and as such, the committee considers the limitation reasonable and justifiable."

Committee members were not unanimous in their support for the bill.

Stephen Andrew, the state One Nation member for Mirani, and Dr Mark Robinson, the state LNP member for Oodgeroo, prepared dissenting reports.

Rob Molhoek, the state LNP member for Southport and deputy chair of the committee, meanwhile, offered a statement of reservation.

Parliamentarians are expected to debate the bill in mid-September. State Labor member for Gladstone Glenn Butcher has previously expressed support for legalising VAD.

South Sea Islanders celebrate traditions and culture

Employees at Gladstone Ports Corporation (GPC) are being given a taste of culture this week, with traditional food, dancing and an even history-lesson to acknowledge and celebrate Australian South Sea Islander people.

Every year, Australian South Sea Islander National Recognition Day is acknowledged on 25th August.

The day follows after the Commonwealth Government officially recognised the distinct cultural group in 1994 and the significant contributions Australian South Sea Islander peoples made to the economic, cultural and social development of Queensland.

Special guests from across the region were all invited to share their Australian South Sea Islander culture and history with employees, including Jovitah Corowa from the Pacific Pikinis Dance Group and members from the Future Directions Community Liaison Group.

Indigenous Affairs Officer Lee-Ann Dudley said the 25 August was an important date on the calendar for Queenslanders to understand the traditions and history behind the day.

"The idea of this event is to encourage our employees to go home and talk to their family and friends about Australian South Sea Islander Day," Ms Dudley said.

"The best way to acknowledge and celebrate this distinct cultural group is by sharing the Australian South Sea Islander People's culture and their history to teach not just younger generations but older generations too," she said.

According to the Queensland Museum, Australian South Sea Islanders are descendants of South Sea Islanders who were transported to Australia to work as indentured labour in the in the Queensland Sugar Industry in the late 1800's.

Some 62,000 islanders, mainly from Vanuatu and the Solomon Islands, arrived between 1863 and 1904.

The event not only increases awareness for Australian South Sea Islander National Recognition Day and GPC's Reconciliation Action Plan but it also demonstrates GPC's ongoing commitment to reconciliation.

A key project in the impending renewables-led jobs boom in Central Queensland is expected to create 2,000 direct and indirect jobs in Gladstone.

Hydrogen to be job boom

By Eilish Massie

The Hydrogen Utility's (H2U) H2-Hub™ project at Yarwun is expected to create 2000 direct and indirect jobs in Gladstone.

The facility was the focus at the Australian Ammonia Energy Conference, held virtually across the country on Friday.

The Yarwun project is planned to be built in stages over the next 10 years to produce up to 3 Gigawatts in electrolysis plant, and up to 5000 tonnes of ammonia production capacity.

A strategic and suitably-located 171 hectares site in the Yarwun State Development Area (SDA) was secured by H2U under a Sale of Land Agreement with the Queensland Minister for Economic Development (MEDQ) in 2020.

The site will integrate up to eight industrial scale process trains to coincide with Gladstone's port.

Speaking from Gladstone, H2U CEO Dr Attilio Pigneri presented to the conference about the future of their multi-billion-dollar project and how local workers stood to benefit from the new jobs that would be created.

Dr Pigneri said Gladstone was leading the pack in terms of the production and potential export of hydrogen and ammonia in Australia.

"Gladstone's proud history as an industry town and its strategic location as a port city means it truly is best placed for this new energy era in Australia," he said.

"The green hydrogen and ammonia industry will be a massive win for the local region and provide ongoing job opportunities for locals into the future.

"Our project alone will create more than 2000 direct and indirect jobs across the construction and operation phases, and we are just one of many hydrogen projects in the pipeline for the region.

"We are already working to lock in local supply chain partnerships across a variety of sectors to support local employment.

"Importantly H2 Hub™ Gladstone will be powered by 100 per cent renewable power supply, creating even more construction jobs in the process."

Earlier this year, H2U announced a partnership with multinational German-based energy company RWE to import green hydrogen to Germany.

At the conference on Wednesday they announced they were putting together a consortium to access some of the $2 billion H2Global funding set up by the German government to help expedite the development of export-scale renewable hydrogen projects.

Dr Pigneri said green ammonia was to be a key part of the global energy distribution chain, providing value for money for Australian production and export companies.

"The predicted growth in this industry is being driven by demand from potential export markets in Asia for power generation and zero-emission shipping," he said.

"Our Gladstone project is currently moving through the approvals process and is expected to be operational by 2025"

"Given the existing workforce and skills are already available we expect to not only be operational by 2025, but to be expanding by 2027."

No market for rebuild of Callide exploded turbine

Queensland will have enough generation capacity to meet our forecast electricity demand for the next decade, according to the Australian Energy Market Operator's (AEMO) annual Electricity Statement Of Opportunities (ESOO).

Queensland Conservation Council Director, Dave Copeman, says AEMO's modelling confirms that Queensland has an oversupply of coal units and does not need to rebuild Callide C4, which exploded in May.

"This AEMO report demonstrates we have enough capacity without rebuilding C4. Why should we waste government money rebuilding a carbon polluting, coal burning turbine when it could be better spent on renewable energy or storage," Mr Copeman said.

Callide C4 will definitely be out of action for the peak period of summer 2021-22. AEMO's forecast shows that its absence will have a negligible impact on the reliability of Queensland's electricity supply. AEMO's report also shows that Queensland's current rent oversupply of coal fired power stations will make it harder to operate the system securely as minimum demand plummets to 2025.

"The renewable energy future is already here and the transition is progressing faster than previously predicted. Queensland's coal power stations will need to be phased out and we will need to invest in more flexible technologies such as batteries to allow our state to achieve the longer term benefits of green export industries," Mr Copeman said.

Street is back in fashion

By Eilish Massie

The reopening of Goondoon Street was celebrated in style, with a fashion event held on Friday, 27 August.

Gladstone Area Promotion and Development Limited's Fashion Friday event enlisted the region's fashion retailers to showcase some of their best looks down a runway.

Funded by Gladstone Regional Council, the event aimed to create buzz in the street after the recent street upgrades shut down Goondoon Street for most of this year.

The event was also an opportunity for the public to enjoy the new vibrant atmosphere of the CBD.

GAPDL events manager Emma Plath said the fashion show was 'fabulous' with the runway designed by Creative Professional and Conservation Diver Jen Hollstein.

"The restaurants in the courtyard did a roaring trade, but it was quiet due to the Symphony under the Stars being the same night," she said.

Residents who went to the event enjoyed entertainment from DjB, a fashion show choreographed by Lynda from Runway 7 as well as a twilight market.

How Covid has taught our leaders empathy

COVID-19 has been one of history's biggest disruptions to the workplace and has led organisations of all sizes and types to reassess how they operate. It has also led many leaders to leave behind pre-pandemic management practices and has forced them to adopt a more emotionally intelligent and empathetic style of management.

Here's 5 ways COVID has taught our leaders empathy:

- 1.They needed to "be the watercooler". In the absence of casual conversations in the office, or workplace, and without the quick watercooler chat, leaders have had to learn to have more informal conversations with staff, which leads to more authentic connections
- 2.Covid has led to a much greater awareness of mental health issues and how they can impact all staff. Leaders who understand and can empathise with staff's emotional states, build higher performing teams
- 3.The most emotionally aware leaders have become more reflective. This introspection leads to much greater empathy, which informs their day-to-day decisions and the way they lead staff

- 4.The pandemic has put care and compassion ahead of profits for many leaders. Given the far-reaching effects of COVID, showing compassion, has become a must for empathetic leaders

- 5.Showing vulnerability is no longer something to be avoided by leaders. Those who are honest, express regret and show emotions are much more likely to connect with their staff

Where is the water?

Green hydrogen is the latest alternate energy solution touted by the State Government to meet its 50 per cent Renewable Energy Target by 2030.

Many industry and business representatives are on board as they aspire to meet commitments to decarbonize Australian industry.

The Gladstone Hydrogen Ecosystem is part of the overall plan.

What is green hydrogen? Put simply, it is the process of splitting the water molecule (H₂O) into its basic elements, hydrogen and oxygen, using renewable energy. This is water electrolysis and involves passing a huge electrical current through water via a machine called an Electrolyser.

The electricity comes from energy produced by solar, wind or hydro generators, hence the term "green hydrogen".

You can argue all day as to the viability and economics of such proposals, but rather than do that I would like to point out some issues and questions that have yet to be answered. There is an old adage in politics, "Don't ask any questions unless you know what the answers are". Given that, I will pose some questions and then present some answers.

It takes around 10 litres of fresh water to produce 1 kilogram of hydrogen. If you expand that out to producing industrial quantities of hydrogen, I'm talking millions of tonnes of it, you will require hundreds of thousands of megalitres of fresh water – so where is the water going to come from?

Water is a necessity of life. We live in the driest country in the world, and water is our most precious resource. Our state relies on flooding rains to continue our production of clean, fresh food, fibre, and fodder, with dam storage and underground water supplies being replenished in these large, seasonal downpours. To make the Gladstone Hydrogen Ecosystem viable, there needs to be an abundance of water.

It is my understanding that both Awoonga Dam at Gladstone and the new Rookwood Weir water is already fully allocated to other industries and household use. I have recently written to Queensland's Minister for Energy and Minister for Water, asking for their answers to this question.

My answer is to build Nathan Dam, between Taroom and Theodore in Central Queensland. Nathan Dam is the largest shovel ready water infrastructure project in Australia with all approvals in place. It is an 880,000 megalitre dam situated on the Dawson River approximately halfway between the small rural towns of Taroom and Theodore in Central Queensland.

If Nathan Dam was built, downstream flows to the Rookwood Weir would enable the water to be pumped to Gladstone via water pipelines thus providing a water source for a future hydrogen industry at Gladstone. Without water, the hydrogen ecosystem will not succeed.

Beware rule by scientists

COVID zero died this week, although many will continue to conduct eulogies for sometime.

It would be better to have zero COVID than some COVID. Coronavirus is a serious disease and Australia has been fortunate to escape significant outbreaks here compared to almost any other country in the world.

We have pursued our own lives unhindered during the pandemic but for a short, almost novelty lockdown at the start, and for the odd closure of our state borders. We have taken glee in comparing our unrestricted existence to that of many less fortunate countries, at times viewing it as vindication of our moniker as the “lucky country”.

Now the shoe is on the other foot. As other countries open their borders, fill football stadiums and return to work we are the ones locking people in their homes in futile desperation of a return to the mirage of zero cases.

Most are waking up to that myth now. A poll this week found that just 27 per cent of Australians thought that Australia will ever get back to zero COVID cases.

I wrote a month ago in the Australian Financial Review that we have to move on from the lockdown approach. It remains a scandal that 18 months into this pandemic we do not have a single cost-benefit study of the merit of lockdowns or any particular restrictions for that matter.

A marked feature of the coronavirus pandemic is that it has found a way to humble almost all governments.

Hitherto, we (along with perhaps some other island nations) have been an exception but if we continue with our blind loyalty to rigid policy responses, we may soon join the club of humbled countries that have lots to be humble about.

The former Chairman of the Productivity Commission, Gary Banks, made this point clearly in an article this week. As he pointed out our policy responses have not had a clear objective (remember “flatten the curve”), there has been little consultation on the impact of the restrictions and no cost-benefit analysis done. Gary makes the perceptive conclusion that a lack of due process and transparency is undermining legitimacy for the measures, highlighted most starkly by the use of the army to enforce orders in Sydney.

To the extent that there has been a public rationale for the lockdown it has been based on the authority of “science” - although science that remains hidden from public view.

CS Lewis warned us of the tyranny of scientists 63 years ago writing that the powers that be “must increasingly rely on the advice of scientists, till in the end the politicians proper become merely the scientists’ puppets ... government involves questions about the good for man, and justice, and what things are worth having at what price; and on these a scientific training gives a man’s opinion no added value. Let the doctor tell me I shall die unless I do so-and-so; but whether life is worth having on those terms is no more a question for him than for any other man.”

The lack of clear and rigorous cost-benefit analyses during COVID has been regrettable, but our deficiencies are not technical in nature.

We know how to conduct cost benefit analysis and we do it successfully in many other areas such as vehicle regulation.

No, our COVID mistakes are much more the result of our shapeless and formless modern philosophy than a deficiency in science per se. Dethroning our hapless scientific ruling class does not require better scientists.

We need to resurrect our belief in the rights of the individual and the mutual respect for the different decisions that our fellow humans make.

Only then will we free Australia from the grasp of COVID zero.

CS Lewis warned us of the tyranny of scientists 63 years ago.

The cancer comes back and the battle begins again

This week CQ Today continues looking at cattleman Sir Graham McCamley’s recollections from his book, Roads in the Sky.

In our 33rd excerpt, Graham continues his recollection of his cancer battle.

It was several months before Graham sought medical advice. The lump under his left armpit had come up at a difficult time, when ‘all hell was breaking loose with the family and the business’.

On 5 December 2012, Graham finally visited a different GP in Rockhampton, who sent him to a radiologist who performed a biopsy to see if the lump was another cancer.

The biopsy showed that Graham did indeed have another SCC (squamous cell carcinoma). An infection delayed things further.

“With the operation on top, it overloaded the lymphatics system of my right arm, and today I still have ongoing problems and can’t lift heavy weights with it.”

The second operation was carried out by a different doctor, recommended by the Princess Alexandra’s radiation oncologist, Dr Matthew Foote.

On 4 December 2012, Shirley’s birthday, Dr Mark Smithers operated on Graham at the Mater Hospital, Brisbane - and he did ‘get all the cancer’.

“He had found a very nasty melanoma on the outside of my arm above the elbow, which he suggested he remove as well at the time of the surgery - how ‘blessed’ was I for this early finding.

“They took the cancers out and they wanted me to have radium but initially, I refused.

We made up lists of pros and cons and after consulting Dr Foote and my naturopath, I agreed to have a short dose of radium at a much lower than recommended dose, commencing on 21 January, 2013, just a short course of 15 days.”

Graham stayed at the Chino Hotel near the Princess Alexandra Hospital and walked up from his treatment every day over that period.

Each day he went in, he talked with a different person about the cancer they had.

“I learned a lot about the different cancers and about other people’s varying attitudes to terminal cancer. It was a dreadful time though, because everything was falling down around me then and my wife, Shirley, wasn’t there - while most of those having the treatment had someone with them.”

Graham had spoken with Allen Smith’s brother Ken, who had suffered with similar cancers to Graham and had effectively been given a death sentence by the doctors.

“Ken had told me that to stop those cancers, I needed to talk to his naturopath, Adrian Jones, an ex-Seventh Day Adventist pastor. So I did.

Cattleman Sir Graham McCamley shares the story of his cancer battle.

“So, before the second operation, I’d already started to go to Adrian and had taken medicine he had recommended: I started on the natural medicine ‘cansema’, taken internally.”

Adrian advocated spiritual cleansing as well as his healing medicines - Amazon tonic from Ecuador, selenium and gumby gumby capsules from here in Central Queensland, as well as natural organic foods and supplements, like garlic, olive leaf extract, mushroom and coconut oil.

“Gumby gumby is a low-sugar, natural Aboriginal medicine that many people use successfully to fight cancers.”

Then, a third SCC came up behind Gra-ham’s ear. Graham and Jacqui returned to Brisbane again to see Maurice Stevens, who had done the first operation and then did the third.

“That was a very major cancer, a mass behind the left ear and extending down my neck. He looked at all the x-rays carefully and said he believed he could get it, but he said they’d not have much of a margin during the operation.

“The naturopath advised me that if Dr Stevens could guarantee he could remove the cancer, to go ahead and operate and then we would follow up with the natural medicines.”

When Graham came too after the operation on 4 September 2012 at St Andrews, Dr Stevens told him they had been able to remove all the cancer - “but it was so close,” he said.

Graham had been out of hospital for some time, but felt he had hardly recovered from the operation when another lump came out on his face.

Sir Graham’s book Roads in the Sky, is available for a generous donation to The Lady McCamley Memorial Foundation from his office at 87 Bolsover Street, Rockhampton or Georges Menswear in William Street, Rockhampton.

The Lady McCamley Memorial Foundation is an ATO registered charity whose focus is on suicide prevention. Receipts are issued for all donations received.

The foundation is run by a diverse board of dedicated volunteers united in a desire to support rural Queensland families.

Festival under the trees

The Under The Trees (UTT) volunteer committee has been working around the clock to present two spectacular events this September 17 and 18.

The committee is very focused on making this year's event memorable for all. Under the guidance of Gaston Boulanger.

UTT is a laid back music and arts festival located 'under the trees' between the soccer fields and oval on Jacaranda Drive, Boyne Island. It is organised by the community, for the community, entirely run and built by volunteers.

And what an interesting group of talented, giving folk these volunteers are. And all this wonderment is due to a local doctor pushing forward with an idea born whilst playing his harmonica with a few mates in his backyard.

Dr Gaston Boulanger is not just a doctor he is also part detective. Whilst he's discussing your ailments - he is also asking pertinent questions about your hobbies to find out if he can get you involved in his many community activities. The ultimate is, of course, UTT.

"Bill, I find out about people to bring them into the community. I'm very community focussed," he candidly expressed.

Gladstone Mayor Matt Burnett explained to me "The UTT Festival began with a conversation between former Councillor PJ Sobhanian and BAM Entertainment coordinator Tom Kirchner on a verandah in Boyne Island."

At the same time, BTAC President Maxine Brushe and Dr Gaston Boulanger were discussing creating a live music event for Boyne Tannum.

PJ explained that "It was created to bring the community together, create economic development opportunities for the community, present small business opportunities and showcase the beauty of Boyne Tannum

Matt added, "After meeting with Maxine and Gaston we made the decision to provide seed funding for their band of volunteers to kick start what is now one of the most popular

ways to preserve
family history

- 1 Create an Ancestry profile
Have you wondered about your origins? Jump online and make an Ancestry account. You can sign up for free, with limited options, or pay to do a DNA test, which will be able to tell you a lot more. Discover your family history and start your family tree.
- 2 Digitise documents and photos
We snap photos on our phones but how many of you actually download them onto the computer and store them somewhere safe? Make digital copies of old and new photos and make sure they can be easily accessed in the future. You might also have some important family historical documents you would like to preserve. Scan them onto the computer and make extra copies to ensure you can find them.
- 3 Host a reunion
Whether it be online or a Covid-19 safe event, plan a catch up with some relatives. Technology allows us to connect like we have never before. Chat about your family's history and days gone by. You may be surprised (in either a good or bad way) with what you find out.

New Economic Development Strategy to guide council

Gladstone Regional Council has endorsed a new Economic Development Strategy that has been developed to guide the organisation through to 2025.

The Economic Development Strategy 2021-2025 has been driven by an internal working group in consultation with the community and business and industry groups since late 2020 and replaces the existing strategy developed in 2015.

Content within the Economic Development Strategy 2021-2025 refocuses Council's direction by considering new emerging trends, COVID-19 and revised population forecasts for our region.

The new strategy also aligns closely with Council's recently endorsed Corporate Plan 2021-2026 and Council's vision to Connect. Innovate. Diversify.

Gladstone Region Mayor Matt Burnett said the Economic Development Strategy 2021-2025 considers the importance of supporting and growing existing industries as well as exploring opportunities created by emerging industries.

"The Economic Development Strategy 2021-2025 is a five-year plan to support the vibrancy, diversity, resilience and sustainability of the Gladstone Region," Councillor Burnett said.

"It contains five core priorities that Council will focus on through to 2025 and sitting underneath those priorities are 18 key initiatives. "These key initiatives cover transport infrastructure and the Gladstone Heavy Vehicle Corridor development, Inland Rail advocacy, Hydrogen Ecosystem development, Transition Economy planning, advanced manufacturing, planning for jobs of the future, fostering innovation driven entrepreneurship, developing an age friendly region, promoting liveability and investment as well as development of the region's visitor economy."

The five core priorities include:

- Encourage investment through support for the delivery of enabling infrastructure and catalyst project opportunities
- Support the capacity of business and industry in the Gladstone Region to prosper in a postcarbon economy
- Support the resilience and prosperity of the Gladstone Region's entrepreneurial and innovative businesses
- Support the Gladstone Region's appeal as a place in which to work, live, play and stay
- Support the development of the Gladstone Region's visitor economy.

Cr Burnett said the Economic Development Strategy 2021-2025 would be reviewed regularly to ensure it stays aligned with changing internal and external environments.

NRL matches deliver welcome boost to CQ economy

By Liam Emerton

The Round 24 National Rugby League (NRL) Telstra Premiership between the St George Illawarra Dragons and the North Queensland Toyota Cowboys held in Rockhampton on Saturday 28 August 2021 was a huge victory and one for the history books.

The two games, the other being battled between the Cronulla Sharks and Wests Tigers, helped bring in 7350 people to Browne Park which not only benefits Rockhampton but showcases our entire region.

Despite plenty of people being disappointed by the cancellation of the Dragons and South Sydney clash, there were still a significant amount of fans comes from around the region, including Biloela, Gladstone, Tannum Sands and other towns.

Advance Rockhampton Executive Manager Greg Bowden said Rockhampton is now on the radar as a viable region to host future NRL premiership games.

“As we have now played host to two successful NRL games right here in Rockhampton, we have put the city and region on the map as a destination to host future games,” Mr Bowden said.

“Thousands of Queenslanders secured tickets to both the Sharks vs Tigers game and the Dragons vs Cowboys game, with 11% of ticket holders across the two games coming from out of region.

“Of those 11% of ticket holders, we expect over half of those people spent a minimum of one night’s stay in our region’s accommodation and would have purchased food and drinks during their stay.

“We estimate the total economic impact to the Rockhampton region from these two games was over $1.2Million, with visitors and our local community spending money in region as part of their attendance at the game.

“Again we have proved that Rockhampton can host high-profile sporting matches, and that events similar to these bring great economic benefit to the region overall.”

Queensland Rugby League Central’s Regional Manager Rob Crow said it’s been great to see a real buzz around Browne Park.

“It’s been fantastic to see people enjoying a great day out at the footy over the past two weekends with Browne Park really coming to life,” Mr Crow said.

The impact that this positive experience had could create more opportunities for local games including looking at venues right across Central Queensland.

The Guide

TOP PICKS OF THE WEEK

SUNDAY
WALTZING JIMEOIN
TEN, 4pm

Stand-up comedian Jimeoin (pictured) proves camping isn't so bad in this lighthearted series road-tripping from Sydney to the Whitsundays. The Irish-born funnyman has an easygoing humour; many will remember his namesake TV series from the mid-'90s, with a handful of specials since. So it's no surprise that he tickles the funnybone in this camping, chatting and stand-up show hybrid, showcasing beautiful Aussie destinations as he cruises around in a stylish light-blue Volkswagen Kombi.

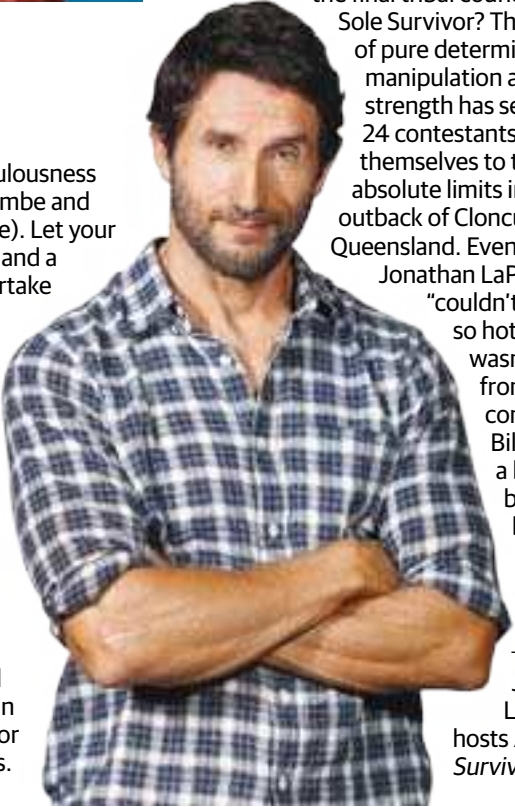

SATURDAY
THE KING'S SPEECH
SBS, 940pm

Tom Hooper's moving tale about the little-known relationship between King George VI and an unorthodox Australian speech therapist is a feel-good tale wrapped up in royal intrigue. Colin Firth delivers an Oscar-winning performance as the stammering king, struggling to overcome his impediment in order to present a composed, eloquent figure to the English public as World War II breaks out. Equally inspiring is Geoffrey Rush, whose quirky, cheeky Lionel Logue bounces brilliantly off the reserved, austere royal he is trying to help. Aussie Guy Pearce is the abdicating King Edward VIII and Helena Bonham Carter (pictured) is as composed as she has ever been as Queen Elizabeth. A rare work of art and a must-see.

HYPOTHETICAL
SBS VICELAND, 8.30pm

You're invited to join the ridiculousness with comedians Josh Widdicombe and James Acaster (pictured above). Let your mind drift, the giggles escape and a general feeling of silliness overtake you. With Acaster's signature blend of awkward, nerdy humour and Widdicombe's comical sidekick role, it's the show's freewheeling sense of fun and creativity that makes it unique. Unlike Would I Lie To You? and Mock The Week, which sometimes feel staged, Hypothetical appears to fly by the seat of its pants. In tonight's season one final, Guz Khan, Cariad Lloyd, David O'Doherty and Sara Pascoe join the merriment with answers for absurd hypothetical situations. It'll test your imagination.

TUESDAY
AUSTRALIAN SURVIVOR
TEN, 730pm

After almost two months of feverishly tuning in three nights a week, the moment fans have been speculating about has arrived: the winner will be crowned. With their pride and a whopping $500,000 on the line, which contestant will leave the final tribal council as the Sole Survivor? The spectacle of pure determination, manipulation and brute strength has seen the 24 contestants push themselves to their absolute limits in the outback of Cloncurry, Queensland. Even host Jonathan LaPaglia, who "couldn't speak it was so hot" at times, wasn't immune from the harsh conditions. Billed as a battle between brains and brawn, who will triumph?

Your year ahead
What an extraordinary time it's been, Virgo - a period of dramatic change. You, more than anyone, have been vulnerable to the cosmic madness that's plagued our planet. Major changes affecting work and home have either merged these two interests or split them wide apart. Either way, it's been disruptive. But here's a year worthy of celebration. Love and professional matters appear back on course, with a delighted Jupiter cheering on both passion and financial flamboyance. The biggest surprise this year will be just how well you cope with the unexpected.

ARIES
(Mar 21 - Apr 20)

Expect an all-or-nothing kind of week, with little middle ground. The highs can bring surges of action - the lows, apathy, or even over-confidence and aggression. If feeling energetic, immerse yourself in demanding activity - especially if you're stuck at home. Yes, you're feeling frustrated - but so is everyone else.
Best Day: Monday 6th

TAURUS
(Apr 21 - May 20)

This week Taurus, you're a natural, socially - professionally, too. The old cliché about catching more flies with honey than with vinegar springs to mind. It's also a great time to update your image. If any caution is needed, it will involve finances. Thanks to a spend-happy cosmos, you suddenly want everything you see.
Best Day: Wednesday 8th

GEMINI
(May 21 - Jun 21)

Be careful not to confuse fantasy with reality this week. Despite your reputation for being detached, there are deep inner depths hidden beneath that sometimes remote exterior. This makes you a bit of a mystery, really. And perhaps you prefer it that way. After all, there's no point in showing your entire hand, when one card at a time will do.
Best Day: Thursday 9th

CANCER
(Jun 22 - Jul 22)

It's a week to slam the door on inquisitive fingers. Whether you see others' attentions as flattery, quality control or espionage - keep your best ideas to yourself. With thinking processes clear and precise, use the latter half of the week to put new plans into motion. Instinct will help you negotiate obstacles.
Best Day: Sunday 5th

LEO
(Jul 23 - Aug 23)

Just when you thought everything was going well, yet another setback may test you. Don't panic. You have the tenacity to get through this. Most Leos work too long and too hard to even consider surrender. You're prepared to take all necessary measures to maintain a sense of stability - that's what counts.
Best Day: Friday 10th

LIBRA
(Sep 23 - Oct 23)

Chances are you've felt restrained by regulations lately, but you're now given a chance to break free. Where others might hesitate before the fear of an uncertain future, you lead by example and show no doubt that you're ready to move on. This could mean letting some old grievances drop, so be ready to forgive and forget.
Best Day: Sunday 5th

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov 23 - Dec 21)

We live on a planet where not everyone will always agree. End result? A battle of wills. Words may be spoken in haste and, in hindsight, with regret. Not to worry - time heals all. The true test, however, comes in learning to overcome obstacles. When one way is blocked, find another. When one method fails, devise a new one.
Best Day: Thursday 9th

CAPRICORN
(Dec 22 - Jan 20)

It's one of those times when you feel like disconnecting your devices and locking your door. But your reclusive behaviour shouldn't be mistaken for the blues. It's more a case of needing some time out for contemplation. With luck, everyone will respect that. By week's end a re-energised cosmos pushes on, and so do you.
Best Day: Friday 10th

AQUARIUS
(Jan 21 - Feb 18)

You often produce your best results when working in a team effort. Of course, it takes the right combination of people to bring about success, and this is where some problems might arise. Finances, however, promise a much-needed boost. Or someone close does well in the cash stakes, and you get to share some of their spoils.
Best Day: Saturday 11th

PISCES
(Feb 19 - Mar 20)

This is a week of change, particularly regarding your image. With charm and charisma peaking, prepare for a parade of admirers. If attached, expect to be especially close to your partner. At work, confidence coupled with creativity should also get most of your ideas noticed and appreciated. And then, you can finally wind down for the weekend.
Best Day: Tuesday 7th

VIRGO
(Aug 24 - Sep 22)

This week's spirited sassiness can't help but turn heads. Business may mix with pleasure. Or perhaps a higher-up is instrumental in pushing you towards success. Whatever the case, right now you're ambitious and talented enough to triumph. If others resent your moment of glory, ignore them. Push your aims skyward.
Best Day: Tuesday 7th

SCORPIO
(Oct 24 - Nov 22)

It's the ethereal, rather than the material, that captures your imagination this week. Now that the pressure's off work for a while, the focus steers towards spirituality and home. Creativity, love and children is where your attention falls. You work hard for your family, so take time to enjoy them too. Dreams have significant meanings.
Best Day: Wednesday 8th

Hundreds enjoy Melodies

Hundreds of seniors enjoyed vocal quartet Belladiva at a recent Morning Melodies last Tuesday, 24 August.

Following their successful Queensland state tour in 2017, Belladiva returned to Gladstone to share re-imagined operatic classics and celebrate the world's best songwriters.

Belladiva's gorgeous combination of classical voices, angelic harmonies and playful musicianship makes the familiar new again with breathtaking modern interpretations of everything from the Summertime to Yesterday.

Morning Melodies give seniors a chance to indulge in a fine-looking morning tea and chat to the scores of local people who drive or take a bus in from all over the region, from Baffle Creek, Ambrose, Calliope, Gladstone and several retirement villages and care communities.

The event is a chance for seniors to catch up with friends across the region.

The morning music and breakfast was enjoyed by all.

Mayor Matt Burnett at Morning Melodies. The council-run breakfast event proved a popular way to spend some time.

Gladdy gets its science on

DEAR GLADSTONE

LYNDAL HANSEN

I had the privilege of participating in the World Science Festival in Gladstone over the past two days. Gladstone is so fortunate to have this type of event here and a big thank you to Queensland Museum and Shell QGC for making that possible.

It is so great to see the kids learning about the science of life. Why the dinosaurs were here, the discovery of new species of spiders, use of drones and experiencing space virtually were just some of the exhibits on display at the Festival.

I was at the World Science Festival on behalf of the Gladstone Region Air Quality Community Group. This Group is about ensuring that the community understand the current level of air monitoring we have in Gladstone and the science around the monitoring.

Having lived in Gladstone for well over 40 years, I think most people have strong opinions about the air quality in Gladstone which are based on assumptions or on an emotional belief.

Many of these assumptions are just repeating what someone else might have said about the air. Some believe the air may have a human health risk.

It's great to have opinions, but to have any real discussion or debate around whether the Australian Air Quality Standards need to be reviewed and if the monitoring is broad enough or the analysis of the data is regular enough, we need to be informed. We need to have a level of understanding of what is actually happening in Gladstone right now.

Lyndal Hansen talking with the Gladstone Region Air Quality Community Group this week.

Did you know the Queensland Government has nine monitoring stations in Gladstone and the data is available on their website and updated hourly? You can even sign up to go on a tour of the air monitoring stations and learn all about how, where and when the monitoring occurs.

The Gladstone Region Air Quality Community Group has Purple Air Monitors available to lend to schools and community organisations to monitor the air near them. The Purple Air Monitors link to a live site where data from every Purple Air Monitor from around the world is available to view.

These monitors can assist teaching our local children about air quality and prepare them to 'care about the air'.

If anyone wants to get more information about the Gladstone Regional Air Quality Community Group, go to their website ww.wairqualitygladstone.com.au.

Glad to Clarify,
Lyndal Hansen

CHILD PROTECTION WEEK 2021!

Nhulundu Health Service applauds the theme of National Child Protection Week 2021 –

'Every child, in every community, needs a fair go.'

We understand the 'bigger picture' in addressing child abuse and neglect. Our staff – in particular those in the Family Wellbeing Program - play an important part every day to help create a safe community for children.

We understand the importance of ensuring every family and every community has what kids need to develop and thrive and be healthy. Unfortunately, not every family has such resources - and this is where our Family Wellbeing Program can assist. Based on the specific needs of families, our program offers a range of services including education, health, financial and community-based assistance to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander families.

Providing assistance to build strong connection with family and culture, the Family Wellbeing Program aims to minimise the risk of children entering or re-entering the child safety system. Our team supports the establishment of safe, strong family environments through home visits, counselling and access to specialist services and parenting workshops.

At Nhulundu Health Service our goal is to ensure 'Every child, in every community, needs a fair go'.

Races for aces a hit

Racin' for Aces went off big time at Benaraby Dragway on the weekend.
The Central Queensland Drag Racing Association thanked all of the visiting competitors for supporting the comp.

And sent out a big thankyou to all of their track, tower, bar and scrutineering staff for helping to make it happen.
Clint Janson was down to capture all the action so here are Clint's best pics from the meet.

Book a journey to finding positivity

I recently made a very special purchase and the mere thought of it has moved me so much, I really want to talk about it.

It's a beautiful book called My Journey by an extraordinary young author and inspiration, Mitchell Richards.

I haven't even received it to read it fully yet but the story behind this story was quick to capture my heart and has already made me see life in a totally different light.

Well equipped with incredible strength, wisdom, spirit, bravery and an effortless ability to change the world around him with his words, Mitchell has brought together a phenomenal book. It harnesses the power to inspire waves of positivity and life-changing shifts in mindset to influence countless generations to come.

I only got to read a snippet before I made the purchase and it's already one of the most empowering books I have ever engaged with. I know this will be a story that will be nestled in my heart for a very long time.

It takes an immensely brave and beautiful human being to sit with suffering and transform it into strength; to carefully craft a story designed to strengthen and lift the spirits of others.

I feel so honoured to be able to encounter such talent through a book of deeper meanings and bigger pictures. I wholeheartedly believe his life-altering book will be a best-selling beacon of hope that shines bright upon shelves and it will illuminate an inspiring path for audiences who get to read it.

I want to take this moment to wish Mitchell all the very best on his journey and thank him for bravely sharing his story with communities far and wide. It will change many lives in more ways than he could ever know.

I can't wait to receive this beautiful book and get to experience its palpable power in full. What a special heart, voice, and now book, our world has been blessed with.

For anyone who hasn't yet, one of the most rewarding things you could do is purchase this special read, support our talented author who made it possible and be sure to check out the lovely blog (Mitchell Richards My Journey) on Facebook where there are also links available to buy the book.

Mitchell Richards' My Journey has an inspiring nature.

Following the tides

By Volunteer Marine Rescue Gladstone

All boat owners understand that there are high tides and low tides, and most understand that having some idea of what the tides are doing is important. Not being aware of the water depth can cause boats to become stranded until the next high tide and in extreme cases can result in the grounding and sinking of a boat! At the very least, it is important to understand how tides work when attempting to navigate complicated areas of the coast.

When questioned on this topic, a lot of boat owners explain that a high tide happens each day and later in the day a low tide will follow. They believe the whole process is more or less linear, but the times seem to change. This understanding, intuitive as it is, misses some very important underlying processes that are at work.

High and low tides do change each day and are normally semi-diurnal, which means there are two high tides and two low tides each day. What is interesting though, is that in most places the difference between high tides is a predictable 12 hours and 25 minutes and the difference between high and low tide is approximately six hours and 12 minutes. It's important to know this, because it means once you know the date and time of one high or low tide, you can work out each high and low tide that follows with great accuracy. This removes your reliance on tide books which some people forget to take and plotters that can malfunction.

However, tide movements are not linear. While the curve of a tide when plotted will be symmetrical, the rate of rise and fall is not constant. It's important to understand the distinction. The rise and fall are instead best described by what has become known as the rule of twelfths.

If we start at low tide, in the first hour that follows the tide will rise by one twelfth of the range. In the next hour, the tide will rise by two twelfths of the range. Finally, in the third and fourth hour the tide will rise by three twelfths of the range per hour. In hour five the tide will continue to rise, but the rate will reduce to two twelfths of the range and then down to one twelfth again in hour six. After high tide, this whole process is reversed over the next six and a bit hours until low tide is reached again. This can be hard to imagine so it is depicted on the graph below which shows the typical water flow in a typical six hour increase or decrease in tide. Remember, this shows water flow, not tide height.

There are two important implications to remember that result from the way tidal flows work. The first is that in hours three and four of a raising or lowering tide, the tidal flows will be at their strongest and will be much stronger than in hours one and six. In an area of particularly strong tides, this must be taken into consideration when deciding where to anchor and how to anchor. The specifics of that will be an article for another day.

The other implication is that a tide will begin to drop slowly but by hour three the rate of drop will be three times faster than it was in hour one. This must be taken into consideration when making decisions about when to leave and when to try and navigate shallow water. If you looked at the rate of drop in hour one and assumed you could wait until hour three to leave based on the change you observed, you could very easily end up running aground because you may significantly overestimate the depth of the water three hours later.

If you have any questions about tides or anything else related to your boat, you can always contact Volunteer Marine Rescue Gladstone at: james.harris@mrq.org.au or www.vmrqgladstone.org.au

The bird we call our beautiful 'Bluey'

Known to some as a 'Bluey', this beautiful parrot is a Pale-headed Rosella.

It is a medium sized parrot that has a very attractive range of colours and patterns in its plumage.

They are often seen in flocks, feeding on the ground.

They have displayed this behaviour recently at Lake Awoonga.

The Pale-headed Rosella can be seen at Lake Awoonga.

Local students given bright opportunity

By Gladstone Ports Corporation

Gladstone Ports Corporation (GPC) is giving local talent a chance to shine, with applications now open for the Talent

Today, Talent Tomorrow program.

GPC's program is in its 8th year and is designed to support the learning journey of regional students by providing financial assistance of up to $21,000 over a three-year period.

Indigenous Affairs Advisor Lee-Ann Dudley said GPC has supported handfuls of students over the years since the program launched in 2013.

"It's a rewarding program not just for students who receive the bursary but for parents and guardians who commit their time to their child's education," Ms Dudley said.

"Creating brighter futures for our Aboriginal, Torres Strait Islander and Australian South Sea Islanders is key to our Reconciliation Plan," she said.

Ms Dudley said the past applicants have created an inspiring pathway for those considering the scholarship.

"Former applicants include Harrison Smith who is now in his third year of completing a double degree of a Bachelor of Medicine and Bachelor of Surgery at the University of Tasmania,"

"Krysta Alexander is a local student who is expected to graduate from CQ University in 2022 with a teaching degree."

Chief Operating Officer Craig Walker said the impact of the program was priceless to the community.

"This program is really empowering for our community," Mr Walker said.

"It not only encourages students to chase their dreams but it gives the financial support to work part-time," he said.

"GPC has provided more than $91,000 in financial assistance to Gladstone and Bundaberg students through the bursary and recognition program since it started in 2013."

GPC acknowledges and values the Aboriginal, Torres Strait Islander and Australian South Sea Islander heritage, culture and people, and the role they play in our organisation as employees, customers and community members.

Applications open on 23 August to Aboriginal, Torres Strait Islander and Australian South Sea Islander students.

A one-off payment of $500 for the junior student and $750 for the senior student will be paid to each of the successful candidates' schools, to be held in trust for the student.

Aechmea Shining Light

Guzmania Mandina

Tillandsia Samantha

So what are Bromeliads?

If there is one plant that has a love hate relationship with gardener it would be the Bromeliad. Over the last few years many high profile landscapes have featured these plants for their colour displays. Yet it would be right to say that the Bromeliad would still be one of the most underutilised plants in Rockhampton landscapes.

So maybe it is time to investigate the benefits of Bromeliads. This weekend at the Rockhampton Show Grounds the Rockhampton Bromeliad Group are conducting their annual Bromeliad and Tillandsia sale this Saturday from 8am - 2pm and Sunday from 9am - 12pm.

For a gold coin entry you can come and gain advice and information about these unique plants from our sellers and guest speakers. Richard Cornale on placing Tillandsia on mounts and potting Tillandsia, Kathryn Fraser on useful tips on growing Bromeliads, Mike Miller on Tillandsia for the beginner and their growing requirements and finally Nigel Thomson on the importance of fertiliser and light in growing Bromeliads.

Bromeliads are perfect in those locations underneath old trees or palms that throw shade where there is always a dense mat of roots that can make it hard to establish other plants. Bromeliads grow very well in these conditions as they don't feed from their roots. Bromeliads basically feed from the water debris that falls into their central cup.

Most Bromeliads grow well on tree trunks and in tree branches. Lava rock or scoria is recommended as a potting medium. If you plant Bromeliads directly into your garden it is best to build up the soil with rocks, gravel or scoria to ensure good drainage. Bromeliads are particularly good for shade areas that are fairly dry from root competition.

Bromeliads need good light to maintain their beautiful colours. There are several varieties that will survive in all-day sun but most need protection from midday sun. Bromeliads are hardy plants native to South America that enjoy the humidity of the tropics.

Bromeliads will produce coloured leaves around flowering time which attracts the insects or birds required for pollination. Bromeliads will flower only once in its lifetime and then produce off shoots, usually from the base and finally die. The cup of the bromeliad should be kept full of clean water and the cup flushed out completely once every month.

Most Bromeliads use their roots for stability and feed through trichomes on their leaves. Their main requirement is to drain well but they can survive being too wet.

Bromeliads mainly need phosphorous and potassium and have a low requirement for added nitrogen as it will only make the leaves long and green. An orchid flowering fertiliser or a bloom booster is the closest to the plants required NPK ratio.

Canistrum Takemura Princess

Remember to flush out the water regularly that sits in the central cup, otherwise mosquitoes can breed in these Bromeliads.

Some Bromeliads varieties to look for:

Aechmea will come in many shapes, varieties and colours, both in leaves and flowers. The flower rises up from the centre on a scape with colourful bracts. After flowering, berry-like fruits form which last up to several months.

Canistrum are large plants, 60-90cm in diameter. The inflorescence nestles in the centre of the rosette, a compact flower head surrounded by colourful bracts, like a basket of flowers.

Guzmania are soft-leafed, with exquisite inflorescence rising from the centre in yellow, orange or red with white or red flower petals. They need to be kept under shade.

Neoregelia are Bromeliads that are grown primarily for their showy foliage with bright colors and interesting patterns, and they are among the most widely hybridized types of bromeliads. Small flowers appear inconspicuously inside of the leaf cup when the plants bloom.

Tillandsias or Air Plants can appear quite alien and can vary in size and shape. Most are saucer-sized but some can grow up to 3 metres. Normally a grey-green plant Tillandsias may change colour when coming into flower.

Tillandsias need regular watering and good air movement to survive. Tillandsias are mainly tree dwellers and can be attached to almost anything.

Managing wild dogs well

AgForce CEO Michael Guerin

Wild dogs and sheep don't mix – that's something we can all agree on.

Far too many sheep and cattle producers have had the misfortune to witness firsthand the trail of devastation caused by wild dogs left to roam free.

Calves, sheep, goats, and native animals – not eaten whole, but played with and left with horrific injuries. Euthanasia the only choice to avoid a slow and incredibly painful death.

These are sickening sights, but, fortunately, thanks to the roll out of subsidised cluster fencing, these scenes are now less frequent.

Another weapon in the war against the dogs – one just as powerful and important – is the 'good neighbour' programs that operate in parts of Queensland to help ensure the responsibility and cost for pest animal management is shared across the community – with everyone required to play their part.

The benefits of this 'nil tenure' approach are clear: they address a problem shared by many of us, easing stress levels for producers and reducing the impacts on the land, livestock, and native animals from wild dogs and other pests.

Of course there's a legal requirement to do your bit too, under the Queensland Biosecurity Act (2014).

And don't be fooled into thinking that because you produce cattle you're immune to the potential menace of wild dogs either.

As Middlemount cattle producer and AgForce Board Director John Baker recently told me: "When wild dog numbers build up, they begin to hunt in packs and will pull down and maim half grown cattle and eat large numbers of calves – which comes at a substantial financial and emotional cost."

That's why AgForce is imploring all producers to take the 'good neighbour' programs seriously – from paper to paddock – to protect our landscapes and our livestock from wild dog predation.

The announcement last week by State Minister for Agriculture Mark Furner that 46 local governments will soon receive $370,000 in funding over three years to buy 1080 solution, used in the baiting of feral pests, is welcome news, and it helps.

But with the State Government 1080 supply all but depleted, it's vital that councils work closely with their producer-led Wild Dog Advisory Committees to ensure continued success of current wild dog control programs.

Cattle grazing on the hillside.

Yarding up at Gracemere

CQLX Gracemere agents had an increased yarding of 3756 head this week. Cattle came from across all the usual Central Queensland Districts between Gin Gin & Mackay and west to Monto and Dingo. Quality, whilst mixed and made up of small vendor runs, was good overall. Condition on some lines showed the effects of a fading season. The normal processor and feeder buyers were present and continued depth in the restocker panel.

Press Notices

When our daily newspaper ceased to publish, Gladstone Valley Funerals took immediate steps to place Funeral and Death notices on our web page, Funeral Notices – Gladstone and Surrounds Facebook Page, and we have had a notice board placed in our grounds. We are now delighted that Gladstone Today is able to publish these notices and they can be seen by all, once again.

Our staff will help you to create the wording for the Death Notice/Funeral Notice to be placed in Newspapers, on our Website and on Funeral Notices – Gladstone and Surrounds Facebook Site. The difference between a Death Notice and a Funeral Notice is that the Death Notice merely advises the public of someone's death.

The Funeral Notice gives the information the public need to be able to attend the funeral – place, date and time etc.

Hot shots ready to strike as CQPL finals series fires up

By Liam Emerton

The Central Queensland Premier League (CQPL) enters its finals series this week with four huge matches taking place.

Three Gladstone-based teams, the men's and women's Clinton FC teams, as well as Central FC ladies, made the finals in the top men's and women's competition with only the men's Central squad missing out.

That team had a golden chance to clutch the last finals position but were beaten 4-3 by minor premiers the Frenchville Roos.

Central had to win that contest to finish fourth but unfortunately fell at the last hurdle despite a brace from Bryson Hardwick and a single goal from Trae Clark leading the way.

That means the men's finals series will see Clinton FC take on the unpredictable Bluebirds United in the elimination final.

The last time these two faced, on 21 August, it was the Bluebirds who got the better of Clinton with goals coming from Liam McLean, Trey Dyne and Anthony Duivenvoorden securing United's 3-2 victory.

That win helped Bluebirds secure their fourth-place position on the table despite having the worst goal differential of any team in the competition.

A month earlier Clinton scored a 3-1 win in a fiery game that included two red cards split between the sides.

Scott Rouse, Dan Jackson and Anthony Cobb were the heroes for Clinton that day but United will also have to be wary of Liam Stephen who poses a major threat in the attacking third.

Those two will face off on Saturday in Gladstone but could play second-fiddle to a potential classic contest taking place before it.

That match will be the ladies' qualifying final with Central FC facing off against Gladstone-rivals Clinton FC.

After the sides finished minor premiers and second respectively, both teams will have a chance at qualifying a week early for the grand final and having a whole weekend off to recover.

This could potentially be the show-stopper.

These sides have played three times this season with Central winning the first two fixtures 7-4 and 5-3, and Clinton returning fire in the third contest winning 5-4.

And it gets even better when you consider the two best scorers in the women's CQPL will be targeting opposite ends of the field with Skye Alexander and Kallie Peurifoy leading their sides' goal tallies.

Alexander, having scored 77 goals across 21 games this season, took out the regular-season golden boot award while Peurifoy, who managed 67 goals in 16 games, finished in second place.

The loser of that match will have a second chance to make the grand final and will play the winner of the elimination final.

The winner of that will either be Bluebirds United White or the Capricorn Coast Eagles who face off at Ryan Park this weekend.

The other match at Ryan Park will be the men's major semi-final as Frenchville take on Cap Coast with the winner progressing through to the grand final.

The loser will face the winner of the aforementioned men's elimination final between Clinton and Bluebirds United.

Kallie Peurifoy will be on the hunt for goals when her team comes up against local rivals Clinton FC this weekend. 249338

Swimmers lap up the Duel

By Liam Emerton

The Central Queensland Swimming Association (CQSA) has come up trumps after winning the inaugural Duel in the Pool.

The Duel in the Pool came at the start of the swimming season and saw our CQ team take on a North Queensland side in a two-day competition in Mackay.

It helped pit our best swimmers in the region - including those from Rockhampton, Gladstone, Yeppoon, Emu Park, and Emerald - against the strongest swimmers from the more northern cities of our state.

On a points system, our Central Queensland squad notched up 569 points to North Queensland's 468, giving our swimmers the first-ever Duel in the Pool trophy.

Jack Kelly and Emma Doherty accepted the award on behalf of their region, etching our squad's name into the history books.

The idea and concept of the meet stemmed from the major organisers of the event, Central Queensland's Michael Borg, North Queensland's Theresa Manning, and Swimming Queensland Development Officer Barry Prime who all played a hefty part in bringing this brilliant opportunity together.

President of CQSA Neal Thomsen said it was a terrific experience for the kids.

"It was a feeler event, as we hadn't done anything like this in the region before," he said.

"It's been done down south, and between the states of New South Wales and Queensland, but not ever in CQ and North Queensland. So it's something we really wanted to push and help grow the region.

"We've been making some good headway, so it's something to get our elite swimmers and our top-end swimmers in our region, from that 12-year-old to 17-year-old bracket, to get them competing against the more elite athletes in the NQ region.

"It is sort of at the start of the main season and it works in really well with the calendar. We have state short-course championships in

Our team of Central Queensland swimmers at the Duel in the Pool event. 249263

Brisbane in three weeks.

"Plenty of our CQ swimmers will be heading down there so it's a good lead up for them. It was in a short course pool, which is a 25-metre pool, so a really good hit out and to test your mettle against the best in the region and the best in North Queensland."

Thomsen said it was good to see kids from all over Central Queensland come together in unity for a challenge, instead of having to face off against each other like they do in most events across the swimming season.

"It's not something they have done too often and it's something they only really do at the state championships in December each year," he said.

"There were swimmers from Gladstone,

Rocky, the coast of Yeppoon, and Emu Park, we even had swimmers come in from Emerald.

"We had a good number of swimmers from right across the park which is excellent to see."

And it wasn't just our kids who came together, CQ had coaches from all over the region helping out which not only benefited our athletes but helped some of our younger coaches learn from CQ's best mentors.

"Head coach Shane Kingston from Rocky City was there, we had other coaches like Jodie Shanks from Caribee, Fiona Johnson from Emu Park, Gracie Wellspring from Yeppoon, Jodi Sprought from Emerald as well as Kate Jones and Jared O'Hanlon. And a couple from Gladstone, Adam Eisman and Theo Fuchs," said Thomsen.

"It's a really great atmosphere with all those coaches. We had a mentor role as well, so we had head coaches and mentor coaches all playing a role in the event.

"There were coaches from the region that could learn from these more experienced coaches and how things work in the representative scenarios.

"We have some really experienced coaches in the region so it's good for them to pass on some of their knowledge."

The athletes who represented our region were:

- Emma Doherty - Emu Park
- Dannielle Schultz - Caribee
- Rhiannon Copsey - Gladstone
- Annamieka Ackworth - Emu Park
- Sally Vagg - Rocky City
- Tegan Sprought - Emerald
- Taryn Roberts - Rocky City
- Shianne Plunkett - Gladstone
- Renee Schluter - Rocky City
- Amelie Smith - Rocky City
- Taylah Sweet - Yeppoon

Diehards a dominant force

By Liam Emerton

The Gladstone Rugby League competition held its grand finals on Saturday with four brilliant games being played at a fierce and high intensity.

The highlight was the Valley Diehards' major victory over the Gladstone Brothers in the A Grade grand final.

David West broke the deadlock in that match in the 20th minute when he crossed for a four pointer.

A successful conversion made the score 6-0, which was doubled when winger Jake Marker secured the Valley's second try of the afternoon to make the score 12-0.

Harry Bateup helped the minor premier Brothers fight back before half time, when he scored to make the score 12-6 after Lyncoln Rebel's successful conversion.

That left the score 12-6 at half time with Valleys already having one hand on the premiership. Seven minutes after the break Algon Congo put the Valleys again up by 12 when he scored and West again converted his shot at goal.

Back-to-back tries for the Brothers closed the gap to two points as Lachlan Ghee and Corey Larsen scored in the 53rd and 59th minute respectively.

A missed conversion attempt left the Valleys' 18-16 ahead and with time running out a last minute try by Jackson Hoyland secured the win for the Diehards in dramatic fashion.

West, who remained perfect with the boot, nailed his final conversion to give the Valleys a 24-16 victory.

"The celebrations have been good and I'm so happy and I couldn't be more proud for the lads," said Valleys coach Les Nicholson.

"On Saturday night they played out of their skin so I couldn't be happier for the boys.

"[Jackson's try] was definitely a pressure release once he went over the line.

"With a minute to go we were only up by two points and then young Jackson Hoyland went over the line.

"Just the jubilation after that was great."

Nicholson was full of praise of Hoyland and spoke highly of his attitude throughout the year.

"I couldn't have wished it on a better guy, he's a true champion that young bloke," he said.

"Jackson stands out by far, he is always the first one at training and he's always there an hour early and he's always there to practice his kicking and passing.

"He's probably a stand out for our backs. Jack Wilson has also been great for us this year.

"Both our front rowers, Shane Eiola and Matty McKeown, both just stood up for us all season long."

Nicholson was all set to coach the Diehards in 2020 but due to the cancellation of the season he was forced to wait another year before taking the reins.

With the Valleys having won the 2019 competition, Nicholson felt the expectations of winning back-to-back titles this year...and was glad to have got it done again this season.

"I wasn't coaching in 2019 and I knew there was a little pressure there to try and go back-to-back," he said.

"We knew we had the side to take us through the finals and get the job done.

"And once again I just couldn't be happier.

"Credit to Brothers, they stuck it to us and never gave up. I think we were up by 12 points at one stage and they kept coming back.

"Every time we'd get in front they'd come back fighting again. That's just due to the well-structured side that they are.

"We knew we had to play for 80 minutes, and nothing less, to get it done out there."

In the other finals, the reserve grade competition saw the Gladstone Brothers earned a tight victory over the Valley Diehards when the Fish took out the title 12-8.

Benjamin Holzheimer and Jake Robertson were the heroes for Brothers as their tries gave the team the 2021 premiership.

The Tannum Sands Seagulls won their only grand final involvement when they won 38-10 over the Valley Diehards in the under-17 competition.

And the Brothers under 15 squad opened the big day with a 56-20 victory over the Gladstone Wallabys to etch their name in the history books.

Capras now the Hunters

By Liam Emerton

The Rockhampton Leagues Club Central Queensland Capras suffered a tough loss last week to the 2021 minor premiers but will be looking to bounce back this weekend.

Luckily for our team they return to Rockhampton's home of rugby league on Saturday, Browne Park, for the first time since 19 June where it drew 17-17 with the Ipswich Jets.

Since then our side has played across the region including Gladstone and Rugby Park, keeping Browne Park fresh for the two NRL contests held in consecutive weeks.

This Saturday the CQ side takes on the PNG Hunters in a massive clash for our top rugby league side.

The Hunters sit four points above our Capras squad on the Intrust Super Cup table but surprisingly the teams have not met this season.

That means the last time these two faced was back in April 2019 when the Hunters won 28-10.

That match was too long ago to draw any conclusions from but both sides are coming off losses in the last round.

PNG lost 32-26 to the Souths Logan Magpies, while our side lost 36-12 to the Norths Devils, who secured the minor premiership with that victory.

Our side had a slow start, being 14-0 down in the 34th minute, but the Capras came back with back-to-back tries to make the score 14-12 just six minutes into the second half.

Caleb Daunt and Takai Mokohar got those two tries, both coming off crash plays, with Trey Browne notching up a double of assists.

But that was as close as the Capras came with former NRL five-eight Tyrone Roberts helping his side to a 36-12 victory.

Our under-21 Colts team came within an unconverted try of the Norths Devils when they lost 28-24 at Bishop Park.

The young Capras took the lead twice in the first half with tries to halfback Peyton Jenkins and second-rower Harlem Russell.

But a comeback saw the Devils take a 14-12 advantage into the halftime break.

Norths and Capras traded tries before Mitchell Leard-Lamont put our team in the lead in the 55th minute but our local team had their heartbroken when Devils' playmaker Hayden Rowbotham scored the match-winner in the 75th minute of play.

This weekend the under-21 Capras will play the Western Mustangs at Browne Park.

The Mustangs have won just a single game this season and our young guns will be looking to take full advantage of the lower placed side.

The Capras are two points outside of the top eight, and every win from now will be crucial in securing a spot in this year's finals series.

This game will be a must-win for the under-21 side if they are any chance of playing finals footy.

The Colts kick off at 2.45pm while the Intrust Super Cup contest will take place at 5pm.

In other Capras news Tyler Szezanowski announced that he will be re-signing for the top side with an extension of his contract taking him through to the end of 2022.

"The Capras have given me plenty of great opportunities throughout the years, and I'm excited to be a part of building some good foundations that will hopefully result in some success for years to come," Szezanowski said on the Capras' Facebook page.

One last step for Saints

By Liam Emerton

While our A-Grade Boyne Island Tannum Sands (BITS) Saints AFL team are out of the finals this year there is still hope for grand final glory for the club.

The BITS Saints will be looking for a double-haul of grand final trophies when the under 15 and under 13 squads bounce into action this weekend.

The under-15 Saints have absolutely dominated this season, winning 15 from 15, and boast an incredible 1124 percentage.

That percentage is the result of our team scoring an impressive 1911 points this season and conceding a paltry 170.

Their impressive winning streak continued in the major semi-final when BITS beat the Rockhampton Panthers 15.10 (100) to 3.2 (20).

The Panthers lost their subsequent final to the Brothers Kangaroos - 5.8 (38) to 5.7 (37) - in a one-point thriller meaning the team in blue and white will be the BITS opposition in the big dance.

The Saints' Max Marsh will be one to keep an eye out for this weekend having kicked an outrageous 107 goals this season.

The under 13 BITS squad had a different path to the grand final having finished second and being defeated by the Yeppoon Swans in the major semi-final.

That forced the youngest competitive BITS squad into an elimination final against the Brothers Kangaroos at Stenlake Park on Saturday morning.

The Saints took an early lead in the first quarter, kicking one goal to no score, to lead by six points, before allowing Brothers back into the game and seeing their lead slip by the main break.

By three-quarter time Brothers led 3.2 (20) to 2.2 (14), but a marvelous fourth quarter saw the Saints come marching home, kicking an inaccurate 1.7 to no score, to eventually claim a seven-point victory, 3.9 (27) to 3.2 (20).

That fantastic last-quarter performance gives the BITS a chance at retribution this week when it takes on the minor-premier-winning Swans.

The heart the side showed against Brothers will be more than necessary to defeat a tough Yeppoon side who will be looking to complete their season in grand style.

For our A-Grade BITS squad, they fell agonisingly close to another grand final contest, having gone down to the Glenmore Bulls in the qualifying final.

The Bulls started strong against the Saints and the side from Rockhampton never looked like losing.

Glenmore rammed home six goals eight in the first half as our BITS stuttered, answering with just 2.1 of their own.

That momentum continued for the Bulls as they finished off the Saints by scoring just shy of a century - winning 12.22 (94) to 8.2 (50) - despite being quite wasteful in the end.

That means the Bulls will face the Swans in the grand final of the men's competition and also the ladies' grand final at Rockhampton Cricket Ground this weekend.

Our juniors are set to open proceedings with the 13's kicking off at 8.30am and our 15's following at 9.45am.
